What is VOAD?

Wyoming Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster (WYVOAD) is a humanitarian association of independent voluntary organizations who may be active in all phases of disaster. Its mission is to foster efficient, streamlined service delivery to people affected by disaster, while eliminating unnecessary duplication of effort by cooperating, communication, coordinating and collaborating.

In easy terms, VOAD is intended to support emergency management as well as those affected by disaster. There are no “VOAD Volunteers” per se, but rather several groups of volunteers representing their own agency. While the Chair of VOAD may be from a particular agency, that agency is not “in charge” of VOAD. The true purpose of VOAD is to provide a platform for best practices to be shared, information to be disseminated, and processes to be agreed upon so when each agency is asked to respond, it happens in an efficient and streamlined manner.

Ultimately, VOAD is just another tool that’s in the toolbox of emergency response. Whether a community is experiencing a disaster and needs sheltering, feeding, debris cleanup, emotional health support, or any other disaster-related need, there are VOAD agencies that are trained to provide those services.

Individual VOAD agencies come in all shapes and sizes. Some are small, local organizations of people who are dedicated to making a difference in their community. Others are nationally and internationally recognized with thousands of volunteers. Both types of organizations are extremely valuable when it comes to disaster response. Agencies are independent and have their own systems, procedures, and practices. However, being part of VOAD helps streamline those practices and encourages training so each agency has a good idea of how to work into a response seamlessly. Regardless of the type of agency, they are eager to foster relationships with other agencies, as well as emergency management partners.

The concept of VOAD has been around since the 1970’s, and Wyoming has supported a statewide VOAD since 2002. While Wyoming continues to build the awareness needed to accompany such a valuable tool, the agencies have been hard at work responding to countless disasters. The agencies and their volunteers are experienced, talented, and second-to-none when it comes to their agency’s specialty. In 2013, the Mountain West VOAD concept was brought to life. Today, over 15 states have participated in MWVOAD activities to increase education, capacity, and diversity. Wyoming VOAD was awarded the State VOAD of the year for 2014. Wyoming VOAD is stronger each year, but we know that no matter the national awards, the real power comes from connecting with those who “run the show” when the disasters come – the partners who live locally.

With the right preparation and understanding, VOAD agencies can complement the great work that is already accomplished at the hand of great emergency management. VOAD agencies thrive under pressure and are ready to offer the sweat and blood to serve communities who are experiencing the worst days of their lives. We look forward to helping you in any way we can and thank you for all you do.

Wyoming VOAD Deployment Procedures

TO REQUEST SUPPORT FROM A VOAD AGENCY, CONTACT THE VOAD CHAIR**

Wendy Luck, VOAD Chair/Serve Wyoming

Wendy@servewyoming.org

(307) 234-3428 (office)

(307) 251-1277 (cell)

*If VOAD communication becomes overwhelmed, the communications plan will be activated to ensure every phone call gets answered, even if it isn't by the chair.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER WHEN DECIDING WHETHER OR NOT TO REQUEST WYOMING VOAD SUPPORT:

- What is the nature of work that needs to be done?
- What is the timeline for the work to be completed?
- Is there a possibility that a long-term recovery group will be needed?

Wyoming VOAD encourages all partners, especially emergency management agencies, to utilize the skills offered by VOAD agencies. If you are unsure whether the situation would constitute the request of VOAD support, please call the VOAD Chair to discuss different options that may be available.

GENERAL PROCEDURES

Each VOAD Agency operates under their own deployment procedures and can be requested individually. However, in Wyoming, we ask that all VOAD agencies coordinate through the State VOAD Officers to ensure a common operating picture and efficiency in response.

It is strongly encouraged that NO VOAD agency deploys without the request or acknowledgement of the managing agency (typically the emergency manager).

CRITICAL INCIDENT STRESS MANAGEMENT

"CISM is a multi-component approach designed to educate, mitigate and provide intervention especially to/for emergency responders following response to an overwhelming incident. Using the model developed by the International Critical Incident Stress Foundation, CISM is an evidence-based practice that provides a non-therapy, but highly therapeutic process specifically for those who are tasked with emergency response in time of disaster."
